

Figuring Out FEMA

Recovering from a natural disaster can be difficult for you and your family.

When the president declares a natural disaster and approves Individual Assistance, the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) can provide support to homeowners and renters who need help to recover.

This guide can help you understand how to apply to FEMA.

PUBLIC ACCESS
DESIGN

What is FEMA for?

While FEMA won't make you or your home whole again, FEMA can provide financial support for disaster-caused costs like:

Helping repair parts of your home or paying for temporary housing

Helping with medical, funeral, burial, and child care costs

Replacing personal belongings like appliances, clothing, and other household items

You have 60 calendar days from the day when the president declares the disaster and approves the Individual Assistance program to apply for FEMA assistance.

● Natural disaster declared

FEMA can provide short-term help, but other government agencies can provide long-term help.

Save your receipts and documents to apply for these programs.

If you get money from FEMA, you don't have to pay it back! But you must use it for FEMA-approved costs.

Learn about help in your area at fema.gov/disasters.

Who can apply?

You or someone in your household must be a:

U.S. citizen or a U.S national (from American Samoa or Swains Island)

A permanent resident/green card holder or other qualified immigrant, like a refugee or asylee

Know your rights!

For example, you have the right to:

Equal treatment! FEMA cannot discriminate against applicants based on race, color, religion, nationality, sex, age, disability, English proficiency, or economic status

Access to reasonable accommodations, if you have any disabilities

Interpretation in your language or if you're deaf or hard of hearing

Appeal FEMA's decision

Disaster Recovery Centers

if they have been set up in your area.

You will need:

- Address of your damaged home (if different from where you live now)
- Proof you are the homeowner or tenant
- Description of your disaster damages
- Insurance information, if you're insured
- Social security number
- Phone number and current address
- Total household annual income pre-disaster

TIP: Take photos of the damages before any repairs are made! Keep copies of everything you submit and make a note of all communication with FEMA.

Note: Only one person from your household can apply.

How does it work?

After you apply

You will get a 9-digit number for your registration. You'll need this number whenever you contact FEMA. Write it down and keep it in a safe place.

A FEMA inspector will come to your home and inspect the damage caused by the disaster.

This inspection can affect the outcome of your FEMA application.

If you move after applying, let FEMA know your new address.

Beware of scams!

During a FEMA inspection make sure you:

- Ask for the inspector's identification. Federal employees will have a government badge to identify themselves.
- Do not give your FEMA registration number, as inspectors will have it in their records.
- Never pay for the inspection.

When working with contractors:

- Always use licensed or verified contractors.
- Get everything in writing and have them list their services.
- Never pay more than a third of the costs in advance. Get receipts for any payments made.

If you think someone is scamming you, call the National Center for Disaster Fraud Hotline at 866-720-5721.

How to appeal

You have the right to appeal FEMA's decision if you're denied or need more assistance.

An appeal is a written letter to FEMA asking them to review your application again.

You don't need a lawyer to appeal, but it's helpful. If you can't afford one, go to disasterlegalaid.org to find free legal help.

TIP: Request a copy of your file from FEMA in writing to know how the decision was made. Keep copies of everything you submit in the appeal.

Go to femaappeals.org to create an appeal and learn more.

Don't give up! You should appeal. You have 60 calendar days from the date on the decision letter you get from FEMA.

What to include in your appeal

1 A letter to FEMA that has:

Date of appeal letter

FEMA application number and disaster number

Last 4 digits of your Social Security Number (SSN)

A sentence saying "I am appealing" and details about why

Address where you lived when the disaster happened and where you live now (if different)

Your signature

Full name and contact info on every page and document submitted

FEMA Application # _____
Disaster Number # _____
Last 4 digits of SSN _____
I am appealing because _____
My current address is _____
Janice Jones
Janice Jones - jjones@me.com

2 Copy of the decision letter from FEMA

3 Supporting documents, such as:

- Contractor or repair estimates
- Inspection reports, photographs, or other proof that your home is uninhabitable
- Documents to show you own your home

After you appeal

After they receive your appeal, FEMA has 90 days to notify you in writing of their decision. If FEMA needs more information, they can:

Call and send you a letter to ask for more information. You have 30 days to respond.

Contact another person, like a contractor or an insurance company to verify your information.

Schedule a re-inspection.

If your appeal is denied and you can show that your situation has changed, you can appeal again. You'll need to submit documents to prove that.

Visit femaappeals.org to learn more.

Legal help

FEMA may set up a legal help hotline in your area. You may qualify to receive short-term legal help related to the disaster. Find disaster hotline numbers at americanbar.org/groups/young_lawyers/projects/disaster-legal-services/
